

Journal Profile

The Revista Colombiana de Sociología is a scientific publication that has consolidated itself since 1979 as one of the publications contributing most to the dissemination of knowledge regarding sociology's classical and contemporary debates. The journal is open to and welcomes articles written both by recognized academics at the national and international levels and by students and alumni of our community

The journal's main objective is to foster dialogue among the different thematic lines of sociology, as well as between these and the other human sciences, the natural sciences, the arts and other types of knowledge, in order to understand and explain the variety of phenomena making up our times and reality. The journal welcomes unpublished articles on theoretical issues or methodological controversies, articles showing research results, as well as critical review essays dealing with recent publications on a specific subject, or book reviews

The Revista Colombiana de Sociología is published by the Department of Sociology of the Universidad Nacional de Colombia, Bogotá branch and is indexed in the Sistema Nacional de Indexación de Publicaciones Periódicas (Publindex), category C. At the international level, it is found in the Latindex portal, Sociological Abstracts and E-Revistas.

Guidelines for Authors

Acceptance of Articles

1. The journal accepts only unpublished articles that represent an empirical or theoretical contribution to sociology, or a contribution to other disciplines, practices, or fields of knowledge from the perspective of sociology. Submitted articles should not be concurrently assessed by other journals. Therefore, together with the article proposal, authors must send a letter of commitment attesting to the originality of the article.
2. The journal welcomes contributions on different topics, whether in the form of articles on theoretical issues and methodological controversy, articles summarizing research results, critical review essays on a specific subject or book reviews.
3. Each article or essay must include a title in both Spanish and English and be accompanied by an abstract (not longer than 110 words) along with four keywords. If the article is the result of a research project, the title and number of the research project and, when applicable, the name of the financing entity should be included in a footnote.

4. Authors must sign their contributions with their nom de plume (complete name used in all of his/her academic publications).
5. Articles or essays should not exceed thirty (30) letter-size pages, in 12-point double spaced Times New Roman font, , including charts, tables, figures, and bibliographic references. Critical book reviews should not exceed twenty (20) pages, in the previously mentioned format. In both cases, we suggest using a maximum of three heading levels, and in case they are numbered, Arabic numerals should be used.
6. Graphic components such as tables with statistics, as well as all types of images (illustrations, photographs, diagrams) should be titled and numbered consecutively throughout the text.
7. The originals of all graphic components must also be submitted in a separate folder (e.g. .xls, .jpg, .tiff, .png). Photographs must have a minimum resolution of 300 ppi.
8. All images, figures, or tables not created by the author should be accompanied by their respective reference or by a written authorization to publish from the author. Likewise, they must include a caption describing the image and stating the primary source used.
9. Foreign expressions or emphasized words should be italicized.
10. Other texts such as projects, documents, commentaries, sociological materials, reviews or news articles must not exceed the following page limits:
 - a. News articles: up to two (2) pages, 12-point font, double space format.
 - b. Other texts: up to five (5) pages, 12-point font, double space format
11. Authors must include a brief professional résumé including full name, name and country of the institution they work for, position, membership in scientific or similar associations, affiliation to research groups, city street and e-mail addresses, and telephone and fax numbers.
12. Duly labeled digital versions (.doc format) of all contributions should be sent to the following e-mail: revcolso_fchbog@unal.edu.co, or submitted through the Open Journal System electronic platform at the following link: www.revistas.unal.edu.co/index.php/recs/user/register, There authors can register, send their articles, follow up on the evaluation process, and have access to the journal's complete collection of articles. If possible, hard copies of the articles should be sent to the following mailing address:

Peer-Review Process

All texts received by the Revista Colombiana de Sociología are subject to an initial review process to check for compliance with the abovementioned minimum criteria and characteristics for the presentation of articles. The Editorial Committee is responsible for selecting the texts that shall be subject to review by academic peers, according to the double-blind policy, which preserves the anonymity of both reviewers and authors. Reviewers are selected on the basis of their knowledge and experience in the thematic area of the article, and they are responsible for giving an academic opinion regarding the pertinence of the article's publication. The peer reviewer's decision, namely, accepted, accepted subject to revision, or rejected shall be formally communicated to the author. Nevertheless, the final decision regarding publication is made by the Editorial Committee. In this case, the journal will send the author a form authorizing publication and reproduction of the article in both print and digital media, through a Creative Commons License.

To withdraw an article before its publication, the author must make a formal request to the editor, bearing in mind that the withdrawal will only become final once the Revista Colombiana de Sociología has issued a formal response.

Originals submitted shall not be returned. The copy-editing process of the article shall be carried out on the basis of the original text and in permanent communication with the authors.

Bibliographic Referencing System

The Revista Colombiana de Sociología uses the American Psychological Association (APA) bibliographic referencing system (6th edition, 2010), available at: www.wisc.edu/writing/Handbook/DOCAPA.html.

Footnotes should only be used to explain, comment or supplement the body of the text and must be numbered in Arabic numerals.

All textual citations should be duly referenced. When quotations do not exceed 40 words, they should be enclosed in quotation marks. However, if they are longer, they should be placed in an indented free-standing block of text, omitting quotation marks.

In-text citations of bibliographic sources should be enclosed in parentheses, thus: author's last name, year of publication of the work, and page, as in the following example: (Weber, 1927, p. 124).

An alphabetical list of bibliographic references should be included at the end of the article, as shown in the following examples. Bibliographic sources consulted without quoting from them in the text should be included in a separate list titled "Works Consulted".
